Three assumptions to enhance the recognition of management research impacts:

-Render more accessible academic publications in management sciences, as they are not explicit enough with regard to managerial impacts and should be understandable for the public at large.

-Enhance the impacts of our research outcomes: the fragmentation of our research constitutes an obstacle to applications in various fields, in particular because practitioners are compelled to integrate the human research management dimension and that of strategy or still of environmental aspects in the decision-making process.

-Going forward in sub-disciplines of management sciences, but also in the analysis of the interaction between these sub-disciplines.
